Thanks Jim.

Completely understandable. Trevor and Peter have been able to provide information that has been very helpful.

I'll try but am fairly busy...may be too close to the action here behind enemy lines.

Have you thought about contacting Border Services to ask for traffic counts? I bet they keep stats.

If you find out how many and what kinds of vehicles have been going through the border, you can compare those against baseline stats and make some good estimates.

I recommend also hitting up the various growers and feeders associations to inquire what they are hearing from their members. The Cattle Feeders Association would be top of my list if I were gathering this info. <https://cattlefeeders.ca/>

Thanks Peter.

Just for clarification, we would be looking for economic impacts only as other ministries are assessing impacts on the issues they are responsible for reporting on.

Thanks again!

Twitter seems to be the best way to keep up on the chatter. Rebel News is the best place to hear what the protestors themselves are saying since Rebel / Western Standard is the only media they'll talk to. They also have a facebook group called AB Coutts Convoy that anyone can join. Good place to watch whats happening. I know they have groups on the other far-right social platforms but I'm not on those.

Jim, if you have any updates on the border blockade would you be able to send them our way? Any intel/anecdotal information is greatly valued and appreciated.

Thank you!

Hey Selena,

Probably the best way to get daily updates is to look Jim Willett in. He's about as close to the situation as a person can be. I know that the Minister of Transportation has been on top of this like a hawk as well. I've cc-ed Jim Willett.

But of course we all know that the Premier's office will naturally have been calling the RCMP every single day to get updates and pressure them into taking action to end the threat to our 24 hour port right? ;)

Today I've been buried at my desk and haven't had time to chase down news. I drove down yesterday and it was fairly subdued. Gale force winds. 50 vehicles at the Milk River check-point. Another 50 or so left down at Coutts.

Hi Trevor and Peter.

Our Branch is asking for daily reports on updates to the Coutts border blockade.

Do you have anything else you would like to share? Would you be so kind to pass on anything that comes across your desks that would be key intel/anecdotal information?

Peter, I understand Dominic (copied) has also been in touch. Perhaps to streamline communication, we all keep each other in the loop using this email thread?

Thank you for any help you can provide on this...the intel is valuable and much appreciated.

Selena
